| 10:00 a.m. - 11:00 a.m. | “Law Enforcement and the Black Community” What does justice look like?Presenter - Terry WatsonDescription - Join Terry Lee Watson, founder of Strategies for Justice and the award-winning author of Welcome to the Sick Mind of a Sane Person: Deconstructing Racism and White Supremacy, for a candid discussion on race, justice, and the role of law enforcement. Despite efforts of community policing, the relationship between law enforcement and the Black community has been strained due to its historical roots, systemic racism, and ongoing incidents of police violence. This workshop invites participants to engage in a critical dialogue about what justice indeed looks like for Black communities in the context of law enforcement. During this workshop, we will - Discuss the role of policy reforms, accountability, and community-based solutions; what reimagining public safety and restorative justice looks like. |
